End of life care

Crossroads Care Surrey

End of life care support service

Everyone has the right to decide where they wish to spend the last days of their lives. For many people this will be at home in familiar surroundings, supported by friends and family.

We understand how distressing it can be to see how a terminal illness is affecting a loved one. That's where we can help. Crossroads Care Surrey provides essential end of life care and support to enable individuals and their family to make the most of their time together at home.

Who can benefit from end of life care support?

People in a variety of different situations can benefit from end of life care services and it can begin whenever you require the support.

These include people who have:

- Co-existing conditions, meaning they are expected to die within 12 months
- An advanced incurable illness, such as cancer or dementia
- Existing conditions whereby a sudden crisis in their condition could result in death

Why choose end of life care at home?

We are dedicated to providing a comfortable, professional and compassionate care service to support unpaid carers who are caring for a loved one during the final stages of life.

We will work with you to create an end of life care plan that puts individual requirements at the centre - ensuring family and friends are included in this process too if required.

We value and respect each person's spirituality and their right to dignified care at this time of their lives.

We manage a care recipient's symptoms, maintain their dignity and keep them as comfortable as possible, whilst you take a break from your caring responsibilities.

We are able to provide support with:

- Medication administration
- Personal care needs
- Manual handling care needs
- Specialist tasks
